Scenes of the Play

ACT I

Scene I: A street in Bagdad, in front of Aladdin's house. At dawn.

Scene II: The trek across the desert. Later that day.

Scene III: Cave of the Lamp. The next day.

Scene IV: Before Aladdin's house. At midnight.

ACT II

Scene I: Chambers of the Princess in the Palace of the Lamp.
In Bagdad. Several days later.

Scene II: Lion hunt in the desert. Same day.
(The audience is expected to participate.)

Scene III: Before Aladdin's house. At dusk.

Scene IV: Chambers of the Princess. Same time, but in Morocco, then in Bagdad.

(Curtains will be opened between Scenes III and IV to permit the audience to watch the scene change.)

This dramatization follows the original tale closely, departing from it only in the adding of two characters, the Camel and the Wazier, to provide comedy in an otherwise purely romantic plot; in putting the Magician to sleep rather than poisoning him; in simplifying unfamiliar terms such as Jinn, Genie, or Afreet to Slave; and in transferring the locale of the story from China to Bagdad, because it is essentially Persian in feeling and dialogue.

Produced by special arrangement with Samuel French of New York.
